

Dear NSEE Members,

NSEE has recently collaborated with the Center for Research on College-Workforce Transitions (CCWT) at UW-Madison, who oversees the College Internship Study, a longitudinal mixed-methods study of internships at 17 institutions. In the Fall of 2020, CCWT will be conducting a pilot study using their online survey instrument to field-test how the study can be scaled up to serve a larger national audience. The pilot study will take place with approximately 20 colleges and universities, and CCWT is partnering with the NSEE to engage several member institutions to be part of this pilot study. For detailed information click here to review the attached FAQs, and review the criteria for your institution to participate in this national survey by the deadline of October 30, 2020. For questions regarding the survey, please feel free to contact the CCWT Program Manager Amy Rivera at arivera3@wisc.edu.

As part of the University of Wisconsin-Madison's School of Education, the Center for Research on College-Workforce Transitions (CCWT) is the nation's first Center for studying student experiences with the transition from college to the workforce in order to inform information policies, programs, and practices that promote academic and career success for all learners. For more information, please click here and visit <http://ccwt.wceruw.org>. More information will be forthcoming from NSEE about opportunities to further engage in scholarly initiatives around experiential learning involving this national internship survey.

In Service,

Dr. Patrick M. Green on behalf of the
NSEE Research and Scholarship Committee